Former FBI Agent Publishes Definitive Guide On Dealing With Police

M. Quentin Williams offers “A Survival Guide: How NOT to get KILLED by the POLICE”

NEW YORK, NY—In the wake of the recent tragedies related to policing issues throughout the nation, New York City attorney M. Quentin Williams, Esq. has recently published “A Survival Guide: How NOT to get KILLED by the POLICE, PART I.” Although the title of the guide may appear to be somewhat provocative, Williams’ well-balanced, impartial take on the current state of affairs is that “challenging times require equally creative solutions.”

“I wrote this book as a tool to help mend the fragmented relationship between law enforcement and the public they are tasked to serve and protect,” said Williams. “I strongly believe that we can move this issue forward to find winning solutions for the public citizenry, law enforcement and the communities they serve.”

While written for the general population, the guide is especially directed toward those who, according to state and federal law enforcement statistics across the country, are at greatest risk of being approached, detained and arrested by the police.

For a limited time only, a digital copy of the guide can be downloaded for FREE at www.SurvivalGuideSeries.com.

Williams, a passionate international speaker and alumnus of Boston College, where he majored in economics as an NCAA Division I athlete, and St. John’s University School of Law, where he focused on labor law, is a legal analyst, strategist and adviser with more than 25 years of established business expertise and over 20 years of legal experience. A former FBI agent, federal prosecutor and executive with the NFL and NBA, he is now the chairman and chief executive officer of The Butler Lappert Williams Firm PC in New York City as well as Williams Media and Marketing Group, L.L.C. in Los Angeles. Williams is also the co-founder of the nationally-distributed EndZone Luncheon Series and the founder of Dedication To Community, an international nonprofit initiative.
